Villa Dead? He Is and
He Isn't, According to Reports Received Here

One faction of the Villa junta is authority for the statement that Francisco Villa has died from pneumonia in the mountains near San Andres, Chihuahua. The other faction says this report is given out to cover Villa's movements and it is added that Villa is so short of ammunition he is unable to carry out an offensive. For the same reason, Carranza troops in the north are said also to have abandoned the offensive.

Carranza consular officials here say they have information that Villa was struck in the chest by a piece of shrapnel shell at the battle of Jimenez, developed pneumonia and has been ill in a mountain cabin.

Confidential agents of the United States government here have another report that Villa, defeated and his force reduced to less than 600 has gone across the Chihuahua-Durango state line to regain his health.

NEW RULE MAY KILL MILITIAArizona Adjutant General
Says Federal Oath Requirement Impossible.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 5.—Adj. Gen. C. W. Harris believes that the regulations now being enforced by the war department are designed to make impossible the further continuance of the national guard. His latest evidence is from a letter of the militia bureau in which requirement is stated that the new federal oath be taken by 80 percent of an organization's "required minimum enlisted strength."

It happens that only one company of the Arizona guard now has the required minimum strength. The regiment itself, through failure of recruiting and the many discharges by favor, through expiration of term of enlistment and other causes, now is down to about 500 men, in 12 companies. But this condition, according to Harris, is not the fault of the state or of the organization, since the regiment and its companies for months past have been under federal control, which included also the recruiting.

In his answer, the adjutant general shows those circumstances and makes special reference to the fact that company I of Flagstaff, signed the new oath, 100 percent strong, though deficient in gross enrollment.

At that time, Villa was suffering greatly from the wound in his leg which he sustained about one year ago in a fight with Carranza troops at Guerrero. The passengers also said that he was on the verge of succumbing and it was believed he went to one of his rendezvous in the state of Durango to recuperate.

Government agents received advice Saturday that Durango city had been occupied by Villistas about two weeks ago.
